At the completion of this program, participants will be able to:

- 1) Identify hospice admission criteria for dementia as a terminal diagnosis
- 2) Understand characteristic problems associated with advanced dementia patients
- 3) Identify three classes of variables that influence anticipatory grief

Care for individuals with Alzheimer's or dementia requires special training and may require placement in a specialized care facility. As that person approaches end-of-life, however, hospice and palliative care can be challenging for family and staff. This program will examine the challenges that caregivers face when working with patients with Alzheimer's or dementia in end-of-life care. Please RSVP to Julie Olds at 614-429-5703 or to jolds@schoedinger.com.
